"Bringing people together to serve humanity"

August 21, 2014

Tom Wheeler
Federal Communications Commission
445 12th Street SW
Washington, DC 20554

Dear Mr. Wheeler,

On behalf of the National Black Church Initiative (NBCI), coalition of 34,000 African American churches working to eradicate racial disparities in healthcare, technology, education and housing, I am writing to express our collective enthusiastic support for Comcast's decision to merge with Time Warner Cable. This merger signals technological innovation and opportunity, which are the building blocks for a strong economy. Lingered unemployment and stagnant wealth recovery in the wake of the Great Recession have disproportionately affected the black community. We hope that this merger will help create and sustain economic recovery, building on Comcast's record of success not only in business operations but also outstanding track record of minority employment, one that is unmatched in the industry.

The black church and its congregants will directly benefit from a strong and open internet. Allowing companies such as Comcast to freely share its latest technologies helps our churches fulfill their calling to share the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and aids us in serving the poor. Healthy competition also enables a competitive marketplace that helps people in lower socioeconomic brackets purchase the things they need to achieve a decent standard of living.

NBCI has thoroughly analyzed this merger. It is the black church's opinion that poor and minority populations will not be negatively impacted in any significant way, especially in regards to access. It is for this reason that 34,000 black churches are supporting this merger. In fact, Comcast has done significant work to help close the digital divide through programs such as their Internet Essentials Program, and we hope to see this work magnified through this important partnership.

Recently I was joined by Comcast leadership in Atlanta, alongside Georgia's First Lady Sandra Deal. In kicking off the latest school year, we announced that in less than three years Comcast has connected more than 350,000 families, or more than 1.4 million low-income Americans, to the power of technology. This is more than the population of San Diego or San Antonio, almost the size of Philadelphia, and more than the population of 11 states including Maine, New Hampshire, Alaska, Montana and Hawaii.

Comcast has promised to include up to six months of complimentary service for any new family that has not yet applied for Internet Essentials. Families who are approved for Internet Essentials between August 4th and September 20th, 2014 will receive up to six months of Internet service. There is no more important back to school supply than Internet service at home, and Comcast understands this priority and stands ready to help provide access.

In addition, Comcast announced an amnesty program for low-income families who qualify for the Internet Essentials program but have a past due balance. If customers have an outstanding bill spanning a year but meet all the other eligibility criteria, they can to Internet Essentials and have outstanding debts forgiven. If customers' outstanding bills are less than a year old, we would like them to settle that debt with us before they are eligible. We are also willing to work with families through payment installments that fit their income and ability.

Comcast is the type of model corporate citizen we need, one who sees the needs within a community and work with nonprofits such as NBCI to create a strong civil society and help it move forward. We hope the FCC and others support your vision for the merger, and offer the support of our faith-based communities as the process moves forward.

NBCI disputes the following claims made by those who oppose the merger:

1. The FCC does not have any good options. Regulating the terms of interconnection would be a difficult, error-prone process. Trying to reverse the decade-old mergers that allowed America's broadband market to become so concentrated in the first place would be even more so. But the growing power of residential broadband providers will put growing pressure on the FCC to do something to prevent the abuse of that power.

To the contrary, the FCC does have a great option in approving the merger and choosing innovation over fear. Fear kills innovation and dampens a strong economy.

2. Further industry consolidation is a bad decision. The more concentrated the broadband market becomes, the more leverage broadband providers like Comcast and Verizon will have over backbone providers like Cogent. That gives the FCC a good reason to be skeptical of Comcast's proposed acquisition of its largest rival, Time Warner Cable. Blocking that transaction could save the agency larger headaches in the future.

We believe is this is the wrong mindset. This will kill innovation of technology and undermine the enormous benefits the merger would have to the economy.

Both of these claims run counter to the proven benefits of this merger. Comcast is most accurate in its analysis of the merge when it states:

This transaction will create a leading technology and innovation company differentiated by our ability to deliver ground breaking products on a superior network. For the past 15 years, Comcast has built scale and operational efficiencies through various cable mergers and acquisitions in a very strategic, disciplined, and financially responsible manner that benefit consumers. In every transaction, we have over-delivered on our public interest commitments.

Importantly, the proposed transaction will not reduce competition in any relevant market. Comcast and Time Warner Cable do not currently compete to serve customers in any zip code in America. This absence of horizontal overlap of the companies' cable systems means that the transaction will not harm competition or reduce consumers' choice in any way.

With this acquisition, Comcast intends to build on our extraordinarily successful acquisition of NBCUniversal, and our unparalleled record of keeping our promises to bring new benefits to consumers in prior cable acquisitions.

NBCI recognizes and defends the following pro-consumer benefits of the merger:

Deployment and Development of Advanced Services: Subscribers to Time Warner Cable will benefit from Comcast's superior service reliability and best-in-class technology and services, such as the X1 Entertainment Operating System and Comcast's VOD platform which provides 50,000 choices on TV and averages 400 million views each month (32 billion views since VOD's 2003 launch). Comcast also offers 300,000 plus streaming choices on XfinityTV.com, and Xfinity TV mobile apps that offer 35 live streaming channels plus the ability to download to watch offline later.

Benefits of Scale: The transaction will generate significant cost savings and other efficiencies, which will ultimately benefit customers. Scale enables better customer experiences as demonstrated by Comcast. Our scale has enabled us to create industry leading products like the X1 Entertainment Operating System, increased Internet speeds, comprehensive communications and digital phone products and features, and home management. The scale will also make us a better competitor vis-à-vis national companies like DirecTV, DISH, Verizon, and AT&T.

Broadband Market Benefits: Comcast is a technology leader in broadband and customers will benefit from its commitment to invest in its high-speed data services. Comcast has increased Internet speeds 12 times in the past 12 years across its entire footprint, and led the industry in the deployment of DOCSIS 3.0. Additionally, Comcast has invested tens of billions of dollars in its network and continues to invest in it. Comcast will be investing hundreds of millions of dollars annually to improve Time Warner Cable's networks, which will bring significant benefits to Time Warner Cable customers, including higher speeds and greater reliability. We also believe the transaction will enhance competition in the broadband market and extend broadband adoption.

Benefits for Business and Enterprise Customers: This transaction will allow Comcast increased ability to offer advanced services, like high-performance point-to-point and multi-point Ethernet services with the capacity to deliver cloud computing, to small and medium-size businesses, as well as backhaul services to wireless carriers. In addition, Comcast will be able to bring to Time Warner Cable business customers enhancements to their package of services that Time Warner Cable does not offer (e.g., hosted voice).

Benefits in Advertising: The transaction will combine complementary advertising platforms and channels and allow Comcast to offer broader and more valuable packages to advertisers. This is especially true in the very competitive and uniquely important New York advertising market.

We understand the need and support for more broadband. This is why over two years ago we held a demonstration in front of the FCC in Washington, DC to advocate for policies that provide more broadband for carriers.

In October 2013 we contributed to the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies report on Broadband and Jobs: African Americans Rely Heavily on Mobile Access and Social Networking in Job Search. NBCI clearly understands the connection between broadband, advancing new technologies and a strong economy both for our nation and especially for the African American community.

I will close by detailing three compelling reasons why NBCI is supporting this merger, aside from the compelling jobs aspect:

I serve as both the President of the National Black Church Initiative and the Chair of the Board of the National Black Religious Broadcasters (NBRB). NBRB represents over 10,000 African American churches that broadcasts either through television, radio or the internet. Now I hope it is clear to you why we are such huge supporters of broadband. Given the lack of universal broadband in our country, we want to do whatever is necessary to support innovative entities like Comcast to help spur new technologies and more broadband. Many of our churches are on the Comcast Cable system. Many of our members can benefit from both X1 Entertainment Operating System and Comcast's VOD platform.

NBCI strongly believes that there is not a sufficient concentration of cable providers in key areas. As we understand it, Comcast's plans would fill in its New Jersey and Connecticut portfolios with Time Warner Cable's New York City customers and add major markets such as Los Angeles and Dallas. Comcast and Time Warner Cable will not compete and Comcast can easily divest a few million subscribers. This absence of horizontal overlap of the companies' cable systems means that the transaction will not harm competition or reduce consumers' choice in any way.

The merger will also directly help our 70,000 small businesses that are represented in our 34,000 faith communities. Comcast's increased ability to offer advanced services, such as high-performance point-to-point and multi-point Ethernet services with the capacity to deliver cloud computing, will help make our small businesses more competitive .

NBCI is prepared to publicly support this merger beyond the submission we are making today. Thank you for your consideration of our position and we look forward to seeing a successful merger take hold soon.

Sincerely,
